I think if it were venting for an underground base it would be a little more permanent...looks like it's on skids? #2 You would not have access to the vents that close. If they are below it, they own above it and you aint gonna see it...And how close is the nearest possible entrance? What government base is near by?

Mustn't have been too 'secret'. You're still alive.

No signs anywhere??

Looks like very high, actively monitored security.

My guess is an emergency communications hut.

The propane tank runs a generator...it needs to breathe.

Emergency flood control station.

Could be quite a few things.

it was near a abandoned cement plant north of dugway, west of great salt lake. just a few miles off of the highway in the desert. East of wendover, i believe google earth has the cement plant marked.

the grand deception of 1947 and the MJ - 12. I think we would be stupid to think that life is just about racism, MTV, McDonalds, Career and economic melt downs. But you're dead on...

there is no water north of dugway (the great salt lake was 40 miles from this location) this was located smack dab in the middle of the desert its a emergency bunker that has been built and maintained by a company that sells rooms inside the bunker to people who think that some sort of armagedon stuff will happen soon. like a time share you never use lol its dumb.

They have vents like this in Phoenix off of Cave Creek road and the entrances are surrounded by Huge Boulders that have been strategically placed to not allow motor vehicles entrance At night if you go up there and listen you can hear forklifts and lots of activity coming from inside the mountain It looks very similar to this except there is no above ground doors. its close proximity to Dugway is what leads me to believe it is neither a mine nor nuclear dump. As far as climbing the fence... you first..

Imao...him first. I love that...and I'll watch climb the fence and see how long it takes for you to get arrested. if its immediate then its high up shit, if you dont its probably for a mine or nuclear waste dump where did i claim that those vents are a secret base? So ventilation vents and A/C units exchanging air with SOMETHING underground means that the topside housing units are the base itself? You make no sense dude. Also do some real research on what i captured on video before commenting as this IS the real deal.
